We told them that he loved us as his children, and that he had sent his only Son into the world to bear the pun-ish-ment due to our sins. 5. Some of them then said, It would be good for us to be children of God, but Banga, the evil demon, would devour us. Where is Banga? I asked. In the Banga tree, behind the village, they replied. 6. No, Banga is not there, said I. The devil dwells in your own hearts, and it is to drive him out, that the Blessed Saviour came down to bleed and die. If w? love him, we will hate sin, and the devil, who is the father of it. But let us cut down the tree, and send Banga about his business. 7. At this they all drew back, affrighted. Bring me an axe, I said. They then cried out, Oh, he would torment and vex us, if we were to cut down the tree! Bring me an axe, I repeated. 8. One youth in the crowd seemed pleased with the idea of setting the devil at liberty. He ran for an axe, and we went in pro-ces-sion to the terrible Banga tree, followed by nearly all the in-hab-it-ants of the village. The women anx-ious-ly begged us.to forbear, for that we did not know what we were doing. 9. Hew away! I called out to the youth who had brought the axe. But...
