Jessica Kingsley Publishers. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Journeys into Palliative Care: Roots and Reflections, Christina Mason, Louis Heyse-Moore, Gillie Bolton, 'The combined practice area of the contributors to this book include social work, psychotherapy, sociology, counselling psychology, creative writing, nursing, and medicine. Several of the authors have multiple professions, and have come to palliative care later in their careers. Indeed, the combined skill of this group is impressive. Each chapter is unique and each story worthy in its own right. The commonalities are remarkable also. I recommend it to all palliative care professionals, when feeling a little-jaded about what we are doing and being swept along with the winds of changing technology and evidenced based practice, and to other health-care workers who feel an inclination to bring a little humanity to their care'. -Omega Vol 51 (1) 77-86, 2005 'This book offers unique way of looking at caring for palliative patients by using the influence of the self. It also offers an opportunity for reflection how our experiences can enrich the experience of patients faced with the prospect of dying. Professionals who enjoy reading stories will thoroughly enjoy this book.' -International Journal of Palliative Nursing 'In a way it is surprising that palliative care has not produced more books like this: collections in which those engaged in the daily work of caring for dying and bereaved people share something of their motivations for entering this particular world, their experiences along the way, and their reasons for staying in or quitting it. Christina Mason was right to embark on this project. She has edited a book that deserves to be widely read.' -Palliative Medicine 2003 'This is a delightful book. Although its focus is on professionals working in specialist palliative care, it would be useful for any practitioner wanting to...
