Non-Statistical Man, The Mission From Mars

By Raymond F. Jones

Armchair Fiction & Music. Paperback. Condition: New. 216 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.2in. x 0.5in. Armchair Fiction presents extra large editions of classic science fiction double novels. The first novel, The Non-Statistical Man is by yet another great science fiction craftsman, Raymond F. Jones. Was it possible there could be human intuition in a pill Charles Bascomb was a man of precise logic not too surprising he pushed facts and figures for a big insurance company. Every thought he had, every action he took, was based on his steadfast, nearly religious belief in the accuracy of numbers and statistics. But something was amiss. How was it possible that a select group of people seemed to have a power of intuition greater than the essence of pure logic itself How was it possible that, with nothing more than a hunch to go on, they all seemed to have the foresight of knowing the exact moment in time when they should purchase an insurance policy It was a maddening riddle for a man who had spent his whole life anchored in reason, cause, and effect. Soon this baffling mystery would lead to an eccentric doctor and his little bottles of multi-colored pills. The second...
